Unique in scope and content, this methods-based text draws on the process of creating a digital archive of commemorative tattoos to examine the production and mobilization of knowledge across communities, disciplines, and space. Deborah Davidson’s interdisciplinary collection addresses the cultural history of tattooing and the social meanings and implications of commemorative tattoos—tattoos that hold significant value for their bearer.

A practical resource for those undertaking archival research or collecting and sharing information across disciplines, this text acts as a template for building connections between academic and non-academic communities. Bridging the gap between theory and practice, _The Tattoo Project_ offers critical insights and tools for courses focused on research methodologies and digital humanities, and provides innovative content for those studying the body, visual culture, and commemoration.

Features
- highlights several case studies and personal narratives to contextualize theoretical and methodological approaches
- includes photographs of archival participants
- features accompanying poetry by award-winning poet Priscila Uppal
- The Tattoo Project digital archive provides additional supplementary materials including photos, videos, and narratives

Author Information
Deborah Davidson

Reviews

"The Tattoo Project_ imaginatively blurs the lines between academic research and embodied narratives, scholarly knowledge and lived experiences. Methodologically ambitious, _The Tattoo Project_ shows the multi-layered meanings behind commemorative tattoos, giving voice and space to the people who embody them. It also challenges us to re-think collaboration and community through the creation of an open digital archive that extends into the public sphere, and how the tattooed body is an imitable archive in and of itself."
— Mary Kosut, School of Natural and Social Sciences, Purchase College, SUNY

"As a unique form of human expression, tattooing transmits a vast body of information about who we are, where we come from, our desires and fears, and who we aspire to be. It offers one of the most powerful biographical, artistic, and intellectual statements on cultural diversity, visual communication, and commemorative agency. The authors of _The Tattoo Project_ bring these profound perceptions to life, generating a timely interdisciplinary study that provides critical new understandings of body-marking and its role in self-making."
— Lars Krutak, Tattoo Anthropologist, National Museum of Natural History, Smithsonian Institution

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements

SECTION I. HISTORY, CULTURE, AND APPROACH: AN OVERVIEW

Chapter Two: Memories on the Skin: A Brief Cultural History of Tattooing
_Margo DeMello_

Chapter Three: Commemorative Tattoos as Visual-Material Media
_Sara Martel_

Chapter Four: Between the Inside and the Outside: Commemorative Tattoos and the Externalization of Loss or Trauma
_Andreas Kitzmann_

Chapter Five: Creative Methodologies
_Gayle Letherby and Deborah Davidson_

Chapter Six: Tattooing as Auto/Biographical Method and Practice
_Gayle Letherby and Deborah Davidson_

Chapter Seven: Visual Research Methods: Memorial Tattoos as Memory-Realization
_Deborah Davidson and Angelina Duhig_

Chapter Eight: Inscribing Memory as a Social Process: The Tattoo Artist–Client Relationship
_Arthur McLuhan, with Wayne Galbraith_

SECTION II. WRITTEN IN THE FLESH

Poem. Not a Cliché, _by Priscila Uppal_

Photos