

Trauma-Informed Juvenile Justice in the United States

Subjects

Juvenile Crime
Sociology
Child and Youth
Criminology and Police Studies
Criminology and Police Studies

320 pages

6.75 x 9.75 inches

September 2016

ISBN: 9781551309484

Available at:

<https://www.canadianscholars.ca/books/trauma-informed-juvenile-justice-in-the-united-states>

To request a review copy:
info@canadianscholars.ca
416-929-2774

Although most young offenders have experienced some form of trauma, the juvenile justice system in the United States is ill-equipped to deal with the effects of trauma, and its focus on punishment often further traumatizes youth. This text presents a much-needed alternative to the current system, advocating trauma-informed interventions based on principles of healing and restorative justice.

Judah Oudshoorn addresses the context of youth offending by examining both individual trauma—including its emotional, cognitive, and behavioural effects—and collective trauma. The volume tackles some of the most challenging problems facing juvenile justice in the United States today, especially the ongoing cycles of intergenerational trauma caused by patriarchal violence and the over-incarceration of African American, Latino, and Native American youth.

The author deftly demonstrates how a trauma-informed approach to juvenile justice can work toward preventing crime and healing offenders, victims, and communities. Featuring a foreword written by Howard Zehr, case stories from the author's own work with victims and offenders, questions for reflection, glossaries of key terms, and lists of recommended readings, this engaging text is the ideal resource for students in the field of juvenile justice.

Author Information

Judah Oudshoorn

Judah Oudshoorn is a Professor of Community and Criminal Justice at Conestoga College. He is also a Restorative Justice Mediator with the Correctional Service of Canada, a Sessional Instructor of Peace and Conflict Studies at the University of Waterloo, an Editorial Board Member of the Internet Journal of Restorative Justice, and the Editor for restorative justice titles in the Little Books of Justice and Peacebuilding series. Professor Oudshoorn has worked in diverse capacities with youth in Toronto and with First Nations people on issues related to residential schools; he is also widely involved in community services that work with men, particularly fathers, on issues of abuse.

Reviews

"The author offers a compelling argument that challenges the reader to consider that community healing comes from unveiling the trauma and distress created by the very systems meant to support and protect our youth. This is a challenge to all members of our communities—but especially to the justice community—to build resiliency, foster healing, support accountability, and tear down the walls of injustice. This text reveals a refreshing and pivotal perspective of youth justice that offers a practical approach to reaching youth and addressing the limitations of our system."

— Cynthia Booth, MA, Coordinator of the Community and Justice Services Program, Cambrian College

"I believe this book will save lives. The author himself is a hero in the truest sense of the word, yet he writes with disarming humbleness about the difficult healing work he does. The book is mighty yet gentle, scholarly yet accessible, rigorous yet deeply personal.... The theory the author offers is deserving of wide readership and contemplation. This book is a perfect example of truly life-changing, loving criminological scholarship."

— Michael DeValve, Associate Professor, Department of Criminal Justice, Fayetteville State University

"This text clearly describes the poor state of youth justice in this country, in a way that points to specific areas for needed change and direction. The trauma-informed approach offered throughout the book helps to synthesize current understandings about evidence-based practices and criminological theories in a very practical manner.... This is facilitated also by the author's frank and personal style that is needed for such an important topic."

— Heath Grant, Department of Law, Police Science & Criminal Justice Administration, John Jay College of Criminal Justice, CUNY

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements

Foreword by Howard Zehr

Introduction
Juvenile Justice that Heals

Chapter 1
A Framework for Trauma-Informed Juvenile Justice

Chapter 2
Theory of Trauma-Informed Juvenile Justice—Why Do Young People Commit Crimes?

Chapter 3
Understanding Individual Trauma

Chapter 4
Collective Trauma, White Supremacy, and Male Violence

Chapter 7
Juvenile Justice as Trauma-Informed Care

Chapter 8
Trauma-Informed Prevention—Ending Cycles of Violence

Chapter 9
Victim-Centered Justice

Conclusion
Principles of Trauma-Informed Juvenile Justice

Notes

References

Copyright Acknowledgements

Index

Related Books

Missing Persons
Derek Congram
Trauma-Informed Youth Justice in Canada
Judah Oudshoorn
Diversity, Justice, and Community
Beverly-Jean M. Daniel
The Sociology of Childhood and Youth in Canada
Xiaobei Chen, Rebecca Raby, Patrizia Albanese